Hancock gasoline gallon soars past dollar mark

By RICH ADAMS
Gasoline prices at some Hancock County service stations have surpassed the $1-per-gallon mark, generating feelings among some residents they are being 'gouged' at the pumps.

Department of Energy, gasoline prices vary for individual stations, and each type of station (self-serve, full-serve, convenience store) has an individual ceiling price it may charge.

Any allegations of price gouging must be investigated on an individual basis, officials in Washington, D.C. and Atlanta said this week.

Amoco Gas Station at Our Shopping Center in Waveland last week began charging $1.02.9 per premium gallon and Stuckey's Candy Shop in Waveland is charging $1.01.1 for a gallon of lead-free gasoline.

Ron Henderson, a public information officer for the U.S. Department of Energy in Atlanta, said Tuesday four individual gas stations on four corners of one intersection may have different ceiling prices they can charge for fuel, based on a formula developed by the Department of Energy.

"Maximum ceiling prices are based on station to station differences," Henderson explained. "We have developed a percentage formula for maximum ceiling prices, and the only way to determine if a station is price gouging is to go from station to station," he explained.

"Gas prices for four stations on four corners of one intersection may vary substantially, based on different types of operation and services offered," Henderson continued.

"Say if one of the stations were a full-service Shell station, another were a full-and self-serve Gulf station, the third were a Majik Market, and the fourth were an independently owned operation—all those price ranges would be different," the information officer explained.

"There is enough latitude in the law to have different prices for each of those services," he added.

Diane Novick, a public information officer at the U.S. Department of Energy in Washington, D.C. further explained the cost of services delivered by each station.

"Each individual gas station has its own maximum selling price which can change when the operating costs in each individual station increase," Ms. Novick explained Tuesday.

"Each station's formula begins with its maximum selling price established May 15, 1973. There is a ceiling price for each grade of fuel," she continued.

"To that 1973 price the dealer adds the cost increase of wholesale gasoline. Then he will add to that three cents each gallon to cover non-product costs," she added.

Ms. Novick said non-product costs include such things as wages, utility

OVER THE HUMP—Premium gasoline prices at this Amoco Station in Waveland soared above the dollar-per-gallon mark last week, becoming one of the first stations in the county to break the three-digit barrier. Depreo retrial request denied

By RICH ADAMS
A request for a new murder trial for Charles Edward (Chuck) Depreo on grounds of alleged improper jury sequestration and possible jury tampering was denied Monday by Circuit Court Judge Leslie E. Grant.

Depreo's attorney, James Atchison of Mobile, Ala., requested a new trial for the convicted murderer last week in the form of a special bill of exceptions accompanied by a signed affidavit citing instances of improper sequestration.

Judge Grant said in his reply to Atchison his request "...cannot be considered by the Circuit Court while the case is on appeal to the Supreme Court."

Citizens demonstrate concern at second development hearing

By ELLIS CUEVAS
A group of concerned residents of Bay St. Louis attended the second 1979 Small Cities Program Public Hearing Tuesday.

The water and sewer project includes the 500 block of deMontluzin, State, St. John and Easterbrook Streets.

The Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant amounts to $269,000, with $218,000 for construction, $21,000 for engineering fees, $5,000 administrative costs and $21,000 for contingencies.

Residents of St. John Street expressed concern about the proposed condition of the gas line on their street.

Groups of residents had complained to the Council on previous occasions about the leaking gas line.

Mrs. Ruth Summers, beauty parlor operator on St. John, asked who was going to pay to have the street fixed when it would be torn up for sewer and water line installation, and if the residents would have to pay to have the street replaced.

Council President James Thrifflie commented, "As it stands now, there will be no participation by property owners on street restoration."

Questions arose about when the project would start.

Ronnie Murray, representative of the Gulf Regional Planning Commission, said probable starting date would be March or April, 1980.

Murray also said the Mayor and Council are doing everything possible

NASA scuttles Shuttle's second full-cluster test

NSTL's second 520-second test firing of the Space Shuttle main propulsion test article (MPTA) was halted Monday some 21 seconds into the test, NSTL Public Affairs Director Mack Herring reports.

which then was discontinued," the director noted.

Monday's test was the sixth static firing of the cluster—four in 1978 and two in 1979—Herring recalled, adding, the maximum duration of 1978 test firings was 100 seconds.

"Countdown on this latest test began at approximately 7:05 a.m.," Herring explained.

"Countdown proceeded smoothly with no irregular conditions indicated," he continued.

"The terminal countdown sequence (T minus 540 seconds) was concluded at approximately 11:30 a.m. with engine cutoff occurring some 21 seconds later," Herring stated.

"The data," said Herring, "is now under review to determine the exact cause of cutoff."

All the engines shut down in normal sequence, intoned the director.

"There was evidence during and after shutdown that there was an accumulation of hydrogen gas in the boat-tail of the test hardware which caused an external fire which was controlled through use of gaseous nitrogen and water fire-control systems," Herring explained.

"The liquid nitrogen and hydrogen have been off-loaded which will permit an examination of the hardware," the director concluded.

Corps soundings show no Waveland surf hole

By LESLIE WILLIAMS
There is no "hole," an alleged crevice under the surf in front of the Gulfside Methodist Assembly Center in Waveland where approximately 24 drownings have occurred, Hancock County Civil Defense Director Robert Boudin affirmed Monday.

Boudin told the Hancock County Board of Supervisors that U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Mobile District employees scanned the Mississippi Sound's bottom within a several mile radius of the hole's location.

"The corps did not find any hole," Boudin said. "The equipment they had NO HOLE-Page 2A

SHORTY NECAISE

District Two Constable Merlin J. (Shorty) Necaise Sr. of 513 Old Spanish Trail, Waveland, announced he will seek re-election to the post in the August primaries.

A Democrat, Necaise will be running for a second term as constable.

He is a welder and graduate of the old Kiln High School.

Necaise is 44 and married to the former Marie Garcia. They have on son, Merlin Necaise Jr., 19.

"Although a constable is independent, he is elected to fulfill duties parallel to those of a sheriff. In District II this includes parts of the City of Waveland and a large rural area. This is not a salaried job, but it often requires long and odd hours in addition to my regular job as a construction worker," the candidate stated.

"If re-elected, I will continue to use my experience and knowledge of this office to do my best and to assist any other officers in making District II a better place in which to live."

Necaise said he will continue to serve the office of constable in District II.

"As a District Two Constable, I will continue to serve the voters of District Two and sup-bills, and any station expenses other than petroleum products.

"Separate items such as increase in rental of the service station and recuperation of installation costs on vapor-recovery equipment which the Environmental Protection Agency requires in some states are added to the price the customer pays at a given station," Ms. Novack explained.

Mike Vickery, an air pollution expert at the Mississippi Air and Water Pollution Control Department in Jackson said Mississippi gas stations are not required to install vapor-recovery devices, although refineries and some petroleum production plants do have pollution control requirements with which they must comply.

Ms. Novack said stations can also increase their prices as state and local taxes increase.

Under a "banking provision" which station owners use during highly competitive "gas wars," the government allows stations which sell fuel at least four cents below maximum selling price to recoup that loss by increasing their prices at a later time, Ms. Novack explained.

"Say in November a station sold gasoline at 76 cents a gallon when the maximum selling price was 80 cents," Ms. Novack explained.

"If that station owner pumped 10,000 gallons at the lower price, the Department of Energy would not make him eat the four-cent loss," she explained.

"If the dealer charged four cents less

Grand jury to study shooting

By RICH ADAMS

The shooting death of a 36-year-old Alabama man in Waveland, apparently the result of a family argument, will be placed before the Grand Jury Monday for study, according to Waveland Police Investigator Robert (Boochie) Tartavouille.

Robert Karl of Wilmer, Ala., was shot Saturday evening at his mother's Arnold Street home in Waveland during a family gathering following the funeral of Karl's brother, Thomas Karl, 44, who had died following a heart attack earlier last week.

Tartavouille said his department will hand the matter over to the July Grand Jury Monday on advice of District Attorney Albert Necaise.

Tartavouille said a family argument ensued during the gathering and Karl was wounded in the abdomen by a bullet from a .22 caliber pistol.

He was rushed to Hancock General Hospital where he died, the investigator continued.

Tartavouille said he hopes to complete his investigation into the shooting by Friday for presentation to the Grand Jury Monday.

He declined to elaborate on the incident pending further investigation.

than the maximum selling price, he can recuperate a one-cent difference," she continued.

"He would then be able to charge $100 more at a later time, whenever he desires. There is a lot of bookwork involved in that, though," Ms. Novack added.

The energy department official said new regulations are being developed which may eliminate the banking provision.

"We are proposing new regulations which we anticipate will be enacted in the next two weeks. These offer four options, none of which include the banking provision," Ms. Novack explained.

"All banking privileges will be lost if the proposed regulations are approved," she added.

Ms. Novack also said some station owners are being heavily fined for refusing service to some customers while making it available to others, constituting illegal business practices.

"Business practices are based on the way the station was operated on May 15, 1973 or the first day of business if the station opened after that. If the station owner served only local, regular customers then, that is the business practice he may adhere to now," she explained.

"If the owner sold to anyone, however, they must continue to do so now," she elaborated.

"The same rule applies to stations who require car washes with a fill-up. If their main operation is a car wash and has always required a gas purchase with a car wash, they can do that now," Ms. Novack explained.

"If a gas station with a car wash requires a fill-up to accompany a car wash now and did not require it in 1973, they are in violation of the law," she continued.

"If station owners are found in violation of price or business practice regulations, they may be fined a minimum of $2,500 a day for each day the violations occurred," she explained.

"If an owner is found to be willfully violating the law, fines are a maximum $10,000 each day the violation occurred," she added.

Ms. Novack said proving willful violations is difficult because the burden of proof is on the Department of Energy.

She also said a station owner cannot sell to local customers only and turn away out-of-state business in an attempt to cater to local residents only.

Some Hancock County residents say New Orleans "weekenders" are exhausting the supply of gas, and limitations should be enacted by station owners to serve county consumers only.

"That is a business practice violation. You cannot do that," Ms. Novack said.

"Reports from Nevada indicated station owners were withholding gas from local residents so they could sell it to tourists only, thus increasing the tourism in the state," she said.

Ms. Novack said anyone suspecting a station operator to be guilty of illegal price gouging or business practice infractions can telephone the Economic Regulatory Office of the Department of Energy in Washington, D.C. at 1-800-424-2248, a toll-free call.

"Have the name and address of the station, the date of purchase, amount and price of gas purchased, and the maximum selling price listed on the pump when you call," Ms. Novack said.

"Each pump by law is required to have a sticker with letters at least one-half inch tall stating the maximum selling price of gas. If this does not match or give a price less than what you pay, that station is in violation of the law," she explained.

She reported the "energy hot line" receives more than 800 calls per day.

graphically displayed the contour of the surf's bottom, and there was no sign of a hole," he explained.

"A 600 foot long by 150 feet wide hole was there about two years ago, but now is filled in," the director stated.

Boudin said the depth of the water, during high tide, where the hole once existed is 7.5 feet.

The director suggested an autopsy be performed on the latest drowning victim at the site.

"The victim may have not drowned after all," Boudin noted.

Supervisors amended the county civil defense's budget adding $1,500 from the general county fund.

The additional money will be used to pay life guard salaries. Advanced life-savers will now patrol on weekends the surf approximately 3 miles in front of the Gulfside Methodist Assembly Center where the past drownings occurred.

"I have been told the guards are being harassed," Boudin said.

"Someone told me," Boudin continued, "the colored people are telling the life guards they are going to go out there and find the hole and see if the life guards come and save them."

Kevin Atwell, one of the life guards responsible for starting the beach patrol said, "The Blacks have not harassed the life guards."

Atwell continued, "Actually, people on the beach have been very polite. They will often ask us where the hole is so they can avoid it, and then thank us for the information."

Boudin, during the Board meeting, said he talked to Waveland Mayor John Longo Jr. and, "Longo talked to me as

Wrensted named Bay Title I chairman

The Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District Title I Advisory Council met June 25, at 2 p.m. in the high school library.

Judy Wrensted was elected chairman of the 1979-80 council.

An evaluation for 1978-79 program was reviewed showing that the program was successful in accomplishing its reading and math achievement goals for the year in the elementary school and unsuccessful in the junior high, a spokesman reported.

The project application for 1979-80 will be similar to 1978-79's in the elementary school. Tutorial Reading Program will serve the students with the lowest percentile scores in grades 2-4 instead of grades 1-3.

The total cost of the 1979-80 program will be $145,000, the spokesman said.

if he wanted them (lifeguards) removed."

Beat Four Supervisor Sam Pernicelli said the life guards had asked him to construct a small life guard stand on the beach in the area under surveillance.

Pernicelli said he does not want to build the stand because the county will be liable if anyone would sustain an injury from the proposed stand.

Longo said Monday, after the Board meeting, "I'm 100 percent in favor of the life guard patrol."

The mayor noted the civil defense director's statement about him was erroneous.

In other business, the Board approved a resolution supporting Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's "clean-up and beautification campaign."

Bay St. Louis Mayor Larry Bennett and Mayor Longo representing their constituency also supported the chamber's campaign by resolution.

The chamber's program is designed, as a continuing effort, to eliminate unsightly heaps of rubbish, refuse, and trash from all areas of Hancock County, Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

Clean-up Campaign Chairman Warren Carver said the chamber will ask all organizations in the county to participate in the program. He plans to solve the aesthetic problem with the county's environment by acquiring aid from "as many people as possible."

"The chamber urges citizens to cooperate with the chamber in making this campaign a most successful undertaking," the resolution states.

Elmer Boyd, speaking on behalf of his mother-in-law, questioned whether the $219,000 would be adequate for the construction phase of the project commenting, "I told you there wasn't enough for the Main Street project," several years ago. Thriffley said the Council would know if there are enough monies before the project gets started, after the bids came in. Council has set Tuesday, July 10 as bid opening date for the 1978 Small Cities Project. Several in the audience expressed concern about the delays experienced in the 1978 Small Cities project on Washington, Sycamore and Keller Streets. Securing property easements and working through the due process were given as reasons for the delay by Ronnie Murray. Thriffley said the 1979 project may be in jeopardy because of the Leonhard Street water well. Bay St. Louis received word that the State Board of Health would not permit the tie-in of any water lines into the system until the Leonhard Street well is back in operation. Dr. Michael Smith, president of Advanced Developments Incorporated, (ADI) received recent approval to prepare plans and specifications for bringing the well up to standards and also for a pressure control system on all wells to stop over pressurization of the system. Smith said the lack of a control on the water pressure has caused the numerous leaks throughout the city. Traffic flow during construction of the project was brought up by several residents, and they were told that everything will be done to hold down the inconveniences. A deadline for the full application on the 1979 project has been set for July 15. Citizens at the hearing expressed concern as to whether it would be met or not, and were told the application should be on schedule.

RE-ELECT SAM J. PERNICIAIRO FOR CONTINUOUS IMPROVEMENT TO OUR COUNTY

Just a quick rundown on a few things that have been accomplished during my 3 1/2 years of office. I have worked with the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland on street improvement, drainage problems, and playgrounds for children. I have resurfaced about 12 miles of road in the rural areas and now have 2 1/2 miles of road to be completed within the week. I also will accept bids on 3 miles of road at the second meeting in July. I have also replaced the wooden bridge at Bayou LaCroix with a concrete bridge. I have always given my fullest support to the elderly people of our county. I have 2 ball parks in the Kiln area which are 90 percent completed and a Community Building that is in process of being completed. This was made possible with the help of Mr. James Travira, Beat 5 Supervisor, from funds that we pooled together on our Community Planning Grant. I supported the Youth Court Building on Court St. I've improved the American Legion ramp at the end of Washington St. and will continue to keep working on the project so the sport fishermen will have a place to launch their boats without problems. I have about 75 percent of the dirt roads in Beat 4 graveled and if re-elected I will continue to improve our streets and drainage problems in my District. I have completely reworked the Catahoula Community Building to allow the people of that area to have a better place to vote for the candidates of their choice. My inventory has been increased from 11 to 23 pieces of equipment to better serve the people. My crew has been to its fullest employment from all different parts of my Beat. So please when you go to the polls on August 7 vote to re-elect Sam J. Perniciario for your Supervisor of Beat 4 in Hancock County. If you have a problem feel free to call any time.

July is the month for annual registration with Mobile Medic Ambulance Service. The service is open to Hancock County and West Harrison residents.

The fee of $26 a year for a family is very small when you consider non-members have to pay at least $85 for an emergency call.

We have had conversations with some folks who had to use the Ambulance Service who were and those who were not members.

The ones who had a membership report they are going to renew again this year and those who weren't members said they had to join because they remember the sting by not being a member when they needed the service.

If you have lived in the area for only a short length of time, we are sure you have seen several Mobile Medic ambulances traveling the streets.

Just think, from June 1, 1978 through May 31, 1979, a total of 1,713 calls were answered in Hancock County.

A total of 520 of these calls were of an emergency nature.

During the past year, Mobile Medic has made considerable improvements in service. An added feature is the certification of all emergency medical technicians as cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) instructors.

These Mobile Medic instructors have been conducting CPR clinics throughout the area. Those familiar with emergency care will tell you that 80 percent of heart attack victims given CPR treatment within four minutes after an attack can be saved.

Call your relatives and friends, if you want further information on the fine service given by Mobile Medic.

We never know what time of day or night we may need their service, no matter our age.

July is the only month to subscribe at the low rate of $26 per family. You can get a coupon from this issue of the Echo or pick up a subscription form at your favorite bank.

We hope you won't need their service the coming year, but if you need them and have a family membership, you can save many dollars.

NSTL conducts anniversary tours

NASA's National Space Technology Laboratories (NSTL), in Hancock County, where the Apollo-Saturn rocket engines were tested in the 1960s, will have special tours and displays during July to commemorate the tenth anniversary of man's first landing on the moon, according to Public Affairs Officer Mack Herring.

Throughout the month, a moon rock will be displayed at the Visitors Information Center (VIC). A film depicting the Apollo 11 mission will be shown in the VIC auditorium.

Visitors will also see models of spacecraft, including the Saturn V rocket which, after being tested at NSTL, launched Astronauts Neil Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin and Michael Collins toward the moon July 16, 1969. Four days later, Armstrong and then Aldrin made their dramatic and historic descent from the lunar module to the moon's surface at Tranquility Base.

The NASA Installation in Hancock County, formerly the Mississippi Test Facility, played a unique and vital role in the nation's quest to land the first man on the moon, Herring said.

The first and second stages of each powerful Saturn vehicle were flight certified at NSTL and then transported by barge to the launch facility at Cape Kennedy. The same type of launch vehicle was used in the subsequent Skylab mission, he added.

"Following the successful completion of the Apollo program, NSTL grew to become the host to 22 federal and state agencies participating in space and environmental programs," Herring said.

The NSTL scientific community is comprised of 3,200 employees cooperatively involved in applying space technology to our daily lives.

"Today NSTL is actively engaged in the testing of the Space Shuttle Main Engines, which will carry astronauts and scientists into space during the next decade and beyond. The sophisticated Shuttle is the first reusable space vehicle, capable of up to 100 missions each," Herring said.

So far this year more than 12,000 visitors from 50 states and 70 foreign countries have toured the 13,500-acre installation. Free public tours are conducted Monday through Friday at 1 p.m. For more information, call (801) 688-2321.

Hospital official's condition critical

By RICH ADAMS

A Long Beach man was listed in critical condition Wednesday with a gunshot wound in his right abdomen following an accidental shooting at Baxter's Fishing Camp in Pearlinton, according to Hancock County Sheriff Sylvan J. Ladner Jr.

James B. Welch, 38, 101 Suffolk Dr., Long Beach, was transferred from Hancock General Hospital to Gulfport Memorial Wednesday after he was shot when a gun apparently dropped from his grip and fired Tuesday night, Ladner reported.

The sheriff said Welch and a friend, John D. McCordle, 30, also of Long Beach, were unloading their boat at the marina after a two-day fishing trip.

The two men were passing an unholstered .22 caliber Ruger from boat to shore when it fell and misfired, wounding Welch in the lower right abdomen with a .22 caliber hollow point-long range bullet, Ladner reported.

McCordle placed Welch in his own pick-up truck and rushed him to Hancock General, where emergency treatment began, the sheriff explained. He was transferred to Gulfport Memorial still in critical condition after doctors there reported he was unable to halt internal bleeding.

Welch, laboratory department director at Gulfport Memorial, was reported still in critical condition there Wednesday.

County Sheriff and Deputy Sheriff Gentry reported to the emergency and ambulance service that the shooting occurred at the marina.

DANGEROUS DROP-OFF - Warning signs on the Hancock County Beach near Gulfside Assembly Center and Buccaneer State Park in Waveland have been erected as a public service by Young Homemakers of America warning that some "24 persons have drowned here - don't let your child be 25." The warning should still be taken seriously in spite of claims this week by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers that the 'hole' in the surf 'does not exist.' Corps soundings in the area possible did not take into consideration the danger of a soft, silty bottom of the hole in contrast to the natural hard sandy bottom of the surf which apparently was destroyed when the 'hole' was created through dredging to pump up the beach in that area. The Corps' findings do not rule out the fact one person apparently drowned in the 'hole' already this year.

Pulitzer winners to address MPA

The publishers of a small town weekly newspaper which won journalism's highest award - the Pulitzer Prize - will headline the 113th annual convention of the Mississippi Press Association at the Broadwater Beach Hotel in Biloxi, July 12-14.

David and Catherine Mitchell, co-publishers of the 2,700-circulation Point Reyes (Calif.) Light, have become to community journalism what Woodward and Bernstein were to metropolitan newspapers during Watergate.

Since receiving the Pulitzer for their reporting of alleged unethical and unusual practices at the drug rehabilitation center, Synanon, the Mitchells have themselves been the subject of national media exposure and offers of book and movie contracts.

The Light beat out such big city newspapers as the New York Times, Washington Post, Chicago Sun-Times and the Los Angeles Times to win the highest award in newspapering.

The Mitchells will address the Saturday-luncheon meeting of the three-day MPA Convention.

At an 8 p.m. breakfast meeting Friday, July 13, Ellis Cuevas, Echo editor and publisher and Rich Adams, Leslie Williams and Geri Mills of the Echo news staff are expected to receive awards in the MPA's annual Better Newspaper Contest.

Some 300 persons from across the state are expected to attend during the three-days of the meeting in Biloxi.

Other events of the convention include a State Department briefing of editors and publishers on the SALT II Treaty, a panel discussion by local public officials concerning their views of press performance, a Candidates' Forum featuring the eight candidates for governor, and a "Nuclear Backgrounder," with views provided by nuclear energy experts from Mississippi Power and Light, Tennessee Valley Authority, U.S. Department of Energy and environmentalists representing the Catfish Alliance and Mississippians Against Nuclear Disposal.

The Horatio Alger-type story of a young couple buying a rag of a newspaper and turning it into a publication recognized throughout the world for its efforts, began unfolding when the Mitchells heard a television report of unusual activities at the drug rehabilitation center located in their newspaper's county.

In the months that followed over 80 articles and editorials were published about Synanon's irregularities, including the purchase of over $60,000 worth of guns.

"It was a most courageous and powerful piece of journalism carried out under very difficult circumstances by a newspaper with very limited financial and journalistic resources," said a Pulitzer judge who is editor of one of those big city newspapers, the New York Daily News.

The awarding of the Pulitzer to the 26-page tabloid weekly marked the first time in 26 years the prestigious prize has been given to a weekly newspaper.

In other sessions of the convention, William Byrd, deputy assistant secretary of a state public affairs, will help newspaper publishers and editors understand the needs of the public and signed SALT II.

A panel of local public officials who have been instrumental in the success of the county's economic development will be the subject of a panel discussion. The panel will be moderated by County Commissioner Robert L. Adams.

for over 40 years without parole; Clyde N. Donnell of Vicksburg, president of the Mississippi Association of Supervisors; Police Chief Larkin Smith of Gulfport, who had one of his officers recently killed in the line of duty; and Jackson Mayor Dale Danks, Jr., who was the subject of intense coverage during the recent Easter Flood and its aftermath.

Gubernatorial candidates Richard Barrett, Leon Bramlett, Gil Carmichael, Charles Deaton, John Arthur Eaves, Evelyn Gandy, Jim Herring and William Winter will appear on the same stage during the Candidates' Forum Saturday.

On Saturday afternoon, MPA will co-sponsor with Sigma Delta Chi, the professional journalistic society, an informational session on nuclear energy.

Participating in the panel will be Norris Stampley, MP&L, Jackson; Mark Wisenburt, TVA, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Nell Fraser, U.S. Department of Energy, Columbus, Ohio; Linda Lewis, Catfish Alliance, Oxford; and Louis Miron, Mississippians Against Nuclear Disposal, Hattiesburg.

Other activities of the Convention include the presentation of awards to winners in the annual Better Newspaper Contest, a deep-sea fishing trip, golf and tennis tournaments and entertainment by Frank Rains of Tupelo, a simultaneous speaker who has appeared numerous times on national talk shows.

The 113th annual MPA convention will be presided over by President T.E. Dickson, publisher of the Magee Courier.

Cadet survey seeks input from fishermen

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

The Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission is circulating a 'Bayou Cadet' user survey within the county to determine the needs of potential users of a proposed anchorage basin there under study by the commission.

Marshall Strong, president of Hancock County Fishermen Inc., said he has circulated a copy of the survey during meetings of his group.

Strong said, "I do not feel the majority of fishermen in the county are aware of the survey."

The commission requests all interested individuals and groups to supply input concerning the proposed harbor facility.

"The information from the survey will be used to guide planning of the harbor and assist the commission in its efforts to satisfy the marina needs of all citizens in the area."

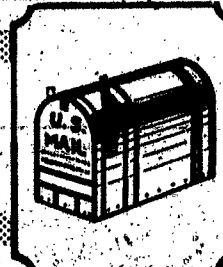

Some questions asked in the survey include:

- What services or facilities would you want at the marina?
- Have you been discouraged from purchasing or owning a boat because of lack of marina facilities?
- Do you currently own a boat? Is it moored at a marina? Are you seriously considering purchasing a boat?
- What is your primary use for a boat?

Strong suggested the commission provide a survey form to be distributed to the county's residents.

Backlund resigns Humane Society position

Editor
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Because it has been my policy to keep the citizens of Hancock County informed relative to the Bay-Waveland Humane Society, Inc., I am hoping that you will print this letter.

It is with deep regret that due to circumstances beyond my control, I must, as of this date, resign as president of the Society.

My years in office were interesting, enjoyable ones. The feeling of satisfaction derived in each and every case when we were able to help an animal or a person, will be hard to equal. Although I will not be attending many of the meetings nor will I be connected in any of the policy making decisions, the future growth of the Society will always be upmost in my mind.

The fear of not leaving the Society in capable hands is not one of my worries. Emile Malandra served as an extremely capable vice-president. He will be the same kind of president. He is a sincere, dedicated person whose desire to serve knows no bounds. A better choice could not have been made.

I wish to thank all of the people who showed such kindness and patience to me throughout the years. It was a delight working with you, communicating with you.

These individuals are too numerous to mention due to lack of space, with one exception - that is the editor and staff of the Sea Coast Echo. These people never refused our numerous and sometimes involved requests. Their friendly, gracious attitude when they complied was always a morale booster.

The Bay-Waveland Humane Society, Inc. accomplishes a great deal of beneficial behind-the-scenes work of which people never hear. I urge the citizens of Hancock County to support the Society so that these ventures can not only continue but flourish.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Clifford Backlund

Heritage stirs Girl Scouting memories

June 27, 1979
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis
Gentlemen:

Your Heritage Issue was most interesting. Since I resided in Logtown until September, 1928, anything about Hancock County interests me.

I would, however, like to add a footnote to the article about Girl Scouting in Hancock County.

We had a very active Girl Scout troop in Logtown in 1924. I still have my receipt for 1924, signed by the Scout Captain, Miss Caro Weston.

Another well remembered leader was Mrs. J.R. (Elizabeth) Weston, who I believe lives in Bay St. Louis.

For several years our troop took part in many activities besides working for badges and other requirements.

I have a newspaper clipping telling of a circus we staged in the Masonic Hall in Logtown - acrobats, dancers, pink lemonade, candy and toy balloons, complete with sawdust.

Each summer we rented a cottage in Clermont Harbor and camped there for two weeks.

With our energetic leaders we had lots of fun and lots of work.

Even though more than a half-century has elapsed, how dear are the memories of those who were Girl Scout members of our troop.

Names of quite a few come to mind: Grace and Valentine Garreau, Irma Koch, Julia Mae Casanova, Inez Casanova, Marguerite and Ruby Sacerdote, Katherine Mead, Reba Speed, Daisy Fountain.

There were others, but can only recall these.

Very truly yours,
Grace Garreau McLelland

Keesler considers civilian cutback

As a result of budget constraints imposed throughout the Air Force and the conversion of three Keesler activities to private contractors, there is a possibility that about 100 Keesler civilian employees will be separated by October 1, a Keesler spokesman reported.

The possible separations will come about because of four actions: the Air Force-wide fiscal year 1979 civilian manpower reductions and the conversion of three base activities from government employees to private contractors.

Keesler officials have been conducting cost studies on five base activities since last October. The studies and subsequent solicitation of bids determined that two base activities - laundry services and base audio-visual services - could be more economically performed by the government.

The most cost-effective method for the other three activities - food services and custodial services for the base and the hospital - was found to be private industry.

In all cases, a minimum of 60 days advance notice of separation action will be given to affected employees. Some of these notices have already been sent out by the base civilian personnel office.

Base officials have requested early out retirement authority to reduce the impact of these separation actions. This authority would give the employees the opportunity to retire at age 50 with 20 years of service or at any age with 25 years of service.

There would be a two percent reduction in an individual's retirement pay for every year he or she is under 55 years of age.

Should this authority be granted, the impact could be considerably less than 100 separations, the official explained.

Those career and career-conditional employees who desire placement assistance will be registered in a department of defense-wide computerized priority placement program. Registrants will be afforded priority rights to vacancies arising anywhere in DOD for which they are qualified and available.

Also, the help of other federal departments and agencies will be solicited and registrants in the priority placement program will be considered in these organizations, the spokesman added.

Benvenuti is new Bay Council prexy

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Peter Benvenuti was elected president and Harry Farve vice-president of the Bay St. Louis Council at the start of the regular meeting Tuesday.

James Thrifley served two terms as president of the new form of government and Benvenuti as vice-president. Mayor Larry Bennett appointed Councilman-at-large Wilmer Seymour as acting mayor in the event of Benvenuti's absence.

The officer election was unanimous by Council members. The meeting was delayed 45 minutes because of the carry over of a Small Cities Hearing on the 1979 Housing and Urban Development Program which started at 6:30 a.m.

Bay St. Louis resident Cornelius Ladner appeared before the Council and asked if it would be possible for him to purchase a small strip of city-owned property between his and Necaise Avenue.

Ladner's reason for wanting the land is because people park there and cause a lot of problems.

Council president recommended that Ward Two Councilman James Thrifley and Joseph Gex, board attorney, get together with Mr. Ladner and bring a recommendation at the next regular meeting.

Local builder Ronnie Artigues appeared before the Council requesting review of a requirement for a builder having to submit four sets of plans for the construction of a residence.

Artigues said a lot of people couldn't afford the $35 or $40 cost per extra set of plans especially with FHA loans. He said he didn't think the four sets were necessary as the set the building inspector had would be sufficient and available to the City Clerk and Zoning and Planning Commission.

Artigues reminded the Council about a recommendation he made several weeks ago about setting a set free for residential permits.

"You have put your building inspector in the position of a tax assessor," Artigues said in reference to the current permit application policy.

Council asked Artigues to get together with other buildings in the area and give them a recommendation on the number of plans necessary for a residential building.

Ames Kergosien, local real estate agent, approached the Council on whether they were putting a halt on beach front construction in downtown area because of parking requirements.

Kergosien was told that each proposed building would be taken by itself on its own merits.

Fred Wagner, council member, said there is no necessity to put a moratorium on issuance of permits, as each would be taken as an individual case.

Bob Waterman appeared before the Council seeking permission for the placement of trash barrels along Highway 90.

Council discussed the problems of other items being placed in the barrels and problems of emptying them.

Mayor Bennett said it was a good idea for Waterman's fraternity to come before the council and offer help, and the idea is a good one if people would cooperate.

Waterman was given the suggestion to discuss the problem with the organization and then return again. In leaving, Waterman told the Council that if ever there was a need for 20 boys to help on any project, to give them a call. Chuck Benigno is president of the fraternity.

In other business Eve McDonald presented her regular budget for the Senior Citizens programs to the Council.

Estel Johnston presented to each Council member a suggested assessment for un-improved property in the City. The tax assessor said she acted on behalf of the Council and would like each member review her suggestions. Ronnie Murray presented a contract which the Council took under study for the Gulf Regional Planning Commission as administrator of the 1979 Small Cities Project.

Council recommended the City Clerk Kelly McQueen contact the engineers who made presentations to the City earlier and have them make a proposal for the administration and engineering on the 1979 Small Cities Project.

Wagner said if one person did the whole job maybe there would not be as many delays and blame being placed on so many as the 1978 project seems to have.

The engineers would have until July 10 to make their proposals.

On a vote on the motion by Wagner for the proposal for the administrator and engineer of the 1979 Small Cities program, Harry Farve was the only member voting against.

Mayor Bennett presented a proposal requested by the Council for the removal of the sidewalk along the beach front for engineering and inspecting by Broadway and Seal engineers.

The price as $750 and Council questioned if the price include engineering and supervision and if so it was passed unanimously.

The project calls for the removal of the sidewalk on the beach side of the boulevard and placement of a new one about five feet back to widen the road for parking on both sides.

Another proposal by Broadway and Seal for the engineering and inspection of the drainage from the Old Spanish Trail at Spanish Acres was accepted by the Council.

The engineering fee would be $1,750 for the upgrading of the main drain in the western side of Bay St. Louis.

Mayor Bennett received approval for the declaring of a cave-in on State and Necaise Street as an emergency.

There are a telephone cable, water main, gas and sewer line in a very close area according to Bill Johnson, utilities superintendent.

A discussion was held on the new sales tax and indications are that it won't go into effect until the earliest, September, according to Joseph Gex.

Some of the documents are not quite in order, according to reports, and several persons have to check it over before activation.

Council adjourned until 5 p.m. Tuesday, July 10.

Bay schools accept fire insurance money

By RICH ADAMS

The Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School Board met Monday in an emergency session to approve an insurance settlement of $117,560 on fire damage sustained at Bay Senior High School Feb. 17.

The settlement, made by the United States Fidelity and Guarantee Insurance Company, was $100 less than predicted by the board and School Architect Fred Wagner, and the total cost of restoring damaged science laboratories and classrooms will be $119,240.

The board unanimously approved the settlement despite the $100 loss after Wagner told the board he suggested the school absorb the deficit rather than refile for the estimated figure of $117,660 so McClendon Construction Company of Gulfport can begin restoration of the damaged wing.

"How much will this (restoration) cost the taxpayers," Board Member James Ginn asked Wagner.

"It will cost the taxpayer approximately $1,000," the architect replied. Wagner said the restoration will improve some aspects of the building, noting new flooring and equipment will be used to replace the 14-year-old material in the original building.

On a motion by Maurice Singleton, seconded by Betty Diboll, the board authorized acceptance of the settlement.

Wagner said the job will require six months to complete, meaning construction will continue into the school year, which begins August 20.

In related action at the Monday meeting, the board accepted the bid of McClendon Construction Company as the firm to complete restoration of the damaged portion of the school.

After initial discussion of the bids, it was discovered McClendon's bid of $108,400 had never been officially accepted by the board and entered into the minutes.

Assistant Superintendent Donald Caldwell, substituting for vacationing Superintendent J.D. McCullough, said he had searched the minutes of a May 10 meeting and could not find any mention of accepting McClendon's bid.

Board President Virginia Gex said she thinks the board took the bids under advisement, and Board Attorney Lucien Gex suggested the board move to correct the May 10 minutes to show the bid was accepted.

On a motion by Diboll, seconded by Singleton, the minutes were amended to read the bid was accepted May 10. At Monday's meeting, the board approved pay consultation on the fire damage restoration.

That figure is three-quarters of the ten percent fee charged by Wagner, the final one-quarter to be paid upon completion of the job, Wagner explained.

The total $10,840 architect's percentage of the total cost is included in the insurance settlement, the architect explained.

The board adjourned until a scheduled July 9 meeting at 7:30 p.m.

Federal flood plain rule changes asked

By LESLIE WILLIAMS
Hancock County Board of Supervisors has requested the National Flood Insurance Commission and the "discriminatory practice" which places a minimum elevation of 13.1 feet mean sea level in Hancock County in comparison to 10 feet in adjoining St. Tammany Parish, La.

Michael Haas, Bay St. Louis attorney representing the Pearl River Development Corporation, urged supervisors to request an elevation equalization.

Haas has said the 13.1 elevation requirement "retards development in Hancock County."

Supervisors Monday approved the resolution asking the commission to equalize the mean sea level requirements in the flood plain areas of the county and parish.

Haas, on behalf of the development corporation, filed an appeal June 20 with the Federal Emergency Management Agency which is presently re-studying flood-hazard areas in Hancock, Harrison and Jackson counties to determine flood elevations for those areas.

Best One Supervisor Bert Courge Monday said the Board had recently written the federal commission seeking an explanation for the discrepancy between the county and parish's elevation requirements.

Haas believes the supervisors move Monday will add pressure in persuading the commission to correct the alleged discrimination.

An excerpt from the supervisors' resolution to the commission reads, "there is no legal or technical basis for such difference in classification between the adjoining governmental units, and this county is entitled to immediate relief from such discriminatory classification."

The resolution further calls for Hancock County's elevation requirement to be lowered to 10 feet consistent with the adjoining area of St. Tammany Parish, La.

A 13.1-foot elevation in comparison to a 10-foot classification requires an individual to pay a higher insurance rate, or either build up the land to that elevation, which is also expensive.

In the business the Board

Received praise from a Hancock County senior citizens group for the Board's assistance to that group.

Listened to complaints from Hancock County Sheriff Sylvan Ladner that dogs, roaming about the county outside the city limits, are biting people. He added the county does not provide a facility for housing these stray animals.

Scheduled a public hearing on revenue fund sharing for 11 a.m. Monday, July 16 at the supervisor's meeting room in the Hancock County Courthouse.

Greeted Marshall Bennett a candidate for Mississippi treasurer. Bennett, an assistant attorney general and director of the consumer protection office, says, "$2,600,000,000 goes through the treasurer's office each year."

Gunshot victim succumbs

By RICH ADAMS

A Shoreline Park man who apparently was shot accidentally in the head by a neighbor Saturday died Sunday at Charity Hospital in New Orleans as a result of that wound, Hancock County Sheriff Sylvan J. Ladner Jr. reported.

Alvin Seely Jr., 68, Route 3 Box 426, was allegedly shot in the right temple Saturday as he sat in a lawn chair in his yard, the sheriff said.

A neighbor, Ken France, was reportedly shooting at opossum in a tree with a .38 caliber automatic pistol when one of the five shots fired, apparently ricocheted from an oak tree and struck Seely in the head, Ladner said.

Sheriff's Deputies Paul Bernard, Ronnie Cuevas, and Mary Beth Twanzyk responded to the incident and notified Mobile Medic of the injury, the sheriff reported.

Seely was rushed to Hancock General Hospital, and later transferred to Charity Hospital in New Orleans. No charges have been filed pending further investigation of the incident, Sheriff Ladner said.

Blessings of bare feet lost in modern society

By S. GRADY THIGPEN

In 1900 many things were in common use and sold in stores everywhere that are now made now and exist now only in the memories of older people.

And, there are many things in common use today that did not exist in 1900, even in the imagination of people living at that time.

A set of tools found in almost every home and sold in stores everywhere 75 years ago was the cobbler's kit.

The important part of the cobbler's kit was the last, a term everyone knew the meaning of back in the old days.

The dictionary definition of a last is: "A form shaped like a foot used by shoemakers in building and repairing shoes."

I recently asked three younger folks if they knew what a last was, or is. One said, "I never heard of it."

Another said, "It must be the only thing left." The other one said, "I don't know what it is but I think it had something to do with shoes."

This is just one example of the great changes, often startling changes in the way people live today, compared to 1900.

To vividly show the difference in the value of $1 in 1900 and now, a complete set of cobbler's kit was advertised for $1.50. Such a kit today would probably sell for near $10.00.

The cobbler's kit or set was an important part of almost every home and was much used over the years. It consisted usually of a stand into which each of the lasts could be fitted as needed.

There were usually three sizes of lasts, sometimes four. There was one for men's shoes, one for boys and women and one for children.

A shoemaker's hammer was in this kit of tools, at least awls, sometimes three, several different sizes of shoe nails and a shoemaker's knife for cutting leather.

All these terms were familiar ones when I was a boy, but terms that many, if not most people are not familiar with now.

When I was growing up we bought our shoes from the stores, but back 100 years and more ago, many of the shoes in rural areas were made at home or bought from shoemakers who lived in most communities.

Money was extremely scarce. Patterns for making shoes from leather were in common use.

Various kinds of protection for the feet of mankind have been in use for thousands of years. Sandals have been in use for a longer period of time than any other style.

More people in the world today wear sandals than any other protection for their feet. The shoes known to us today have been in use for many years with many improvements over the first ones worn in the long ago.

In talking to a shoe repairman, he said that most of the shoes made today are inferior in endurance, compared to the all-leather shoes made a short time ago.

The leather shoes were more durable and easier to repair than the plastic of which shoes are made today.

Back in the old days shoes, though cheap by present day standards, were considered expensive, especially back in the days of slavery.

For this reason, many made their shoes at home. Others in pioneer days lived in isolated sections where stores were not available and had to provide their own feet protection.

There was an old place 4 miles west of Piquette on Pearl River, later known as the Henry Smith place, owned by the Farr family before the civil war.

They owned many slaves - no one seemed to know how many, but it seems from available information they must have had close to 100.

On that old place there was at least one shoemaker, a black man who devoted his time and talents to keeping the Farr family and their slaves shod.

The slaves were not the only ones who learned to make and repair shoes. The heads of most families repaired the shoes for the members of the family.

In the area where I grew up most of the men who had families were adept at using cobbler's tools.

By that time practically all shoes were bought in stores, but the man of the house kept the shoes half-soled and otherwise mended to make them last a longer time.

The old timer not only knew how to make and repair shoes, he also knew how to kill a cow, skin her, and prepare the leather for shoes and other uses.

In an old catalog printed in 1900 which a fine old lady brought to me recently, there were many shoes advertised for sale. Men's shoes were priced from $1 per pair to $5 per pair for the best ones; women's shoes about the same.

These prices which now look so low, were considered high back then. I remember when a low cost work shoe, called a brogan, sold for as little as $1 a pair.

The explanation for these low prices is that a dollar back then was worth as much as up to $10 in purchasing power today.

It was about this time, that I remember my father selling cotton for $17.50 per bale. After planting, cultivating it, picking it, getting it ginned at a cost of $2.50 and hauling it 20 miles to market. In other words, a farmer could have bought as much with $17.50 in 1900 as he could buy today for $150 to $200.

When I was growing up around 1900 my father used his cobbler's tools to repair all the shoes for the whole family.

We had to wear the old shoes until they were worn out, or we had grown so much the old ones did not fit.

When I was a boy we did not wear shoes nearly so much as now. Almost all boys and girls went barefoot in summer, and how we liked it!

I'll never forget how good it felt to turn our feet loose and go barefoot in spring after having them bound up in shoes during the winter months.

To this day at age 89, I still revel in walking around barefoot in the green grass in my back yard.

There is a highly pleasurable communion with nature that harks back to the days when shoes were not so generally worn as now.

It was often told how persons who tried to economize by saving their shoes for all the wear they could and who would wear their shoes only on special occasions.

A dear old friend of mine who died in his eighties many years ago, told of how he would go to church four miles away from his home on Sunday once a month.

He would carry his shoes in hands for the first two miles, stop at his girl friend's house where she would join him with her shoes in her hand.

They walked barefoot the two miles to their church, stopped at a little branch near the church, washed their feet and put on their shoes.

Since I've been in business in Piquette now going on 61 years - I've had good customers from out in the country come into my store barefoot.

In every case these men were men well able to buy all the shoes they needed and much more, but they just liked it that way. There is truly a great physical pleasure in going barefoot in spring and summer.

A sample contract for the sale of the timber is attached. Should a prospective buyer wish to vary this contract, it is requested that he appear in writing ten days prior to opening of bids. The contract will be for a period of 12 months from the date of signing, and will provide for 6 months extension by mutual agreement of the Seller and Buyer, in case inclement weather should disrupt logging for an appreciable length of time.

May 1, 1979
Honorable Mayor and Councilmen
City of Bay St. Louis
Bay St. Louis, Mississippi

Gentlemen:

We have examined the balance sheet of the City of Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, Utility System as of September 30, 1978, and the related statements of revenues and expenditures, retained earnings and fund balances of the various funds for the year then ended. Except as explained in the following paragraph, our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and according to the terms of the auditing contract and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

The Utility System's payroll computations and related payroll expenditures are based upon time and attendance records. These records were insufficient to substantiate the amount of salaries for maintenance and repair employees in the amount of $98,308 shown on the Statement of Revenue and Expenditures in the Operation and Maintenance Fund. The nature of the deficiency was one that could not have been satisfied by the application of alternative procedures because the validity of the payroll computations depends upon accurate time and attendance records. The costs of the system's fixed assets as well as the related allowances for depreciation are not carried on the balance sheet nor is depreciation reflected on the statement of revenues and expenditures, but instead capital outlay is charged to expenditures in the year of purchase. Inventories of materials and supplies are not taken at the end of each year and consequently are not included in the balance sheet; nor are the differences in the beginning and ending inventories of the items reflected in the statement of revenues and expenditures; the bonded debt due in ensuing years is not carried as a liability on the balance sheet; nor are the amounts due on installment contracts in subsequent years recorded as liabilities unless payments have been made.

In our opinion, except for the effects of such adjustments, if any, as might have been determined to be necessary to the payroll, depreciation, and fixed assets, the financial statements and the accounting policies are closer to those of a general fund than the enterprise fund accounting principles generally recommended for utility systems. This hybrid presentation does not facilitate the presentation of a statement of changes in financial position which has been omitted from the statements prepared. The omission of a statement of changes in financial position is a departure from generally accepted accounting principles that causes the financial presentation to be considered incomplete.

Junior High fire case reward effect cited

Mississippi's arsonists should begin to feel the heat from some of their own fires soon when two new programs take effect in the state, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

The first program, effective July 1, enables the state fire marshal to offer rewards of up to $1,000 for information that leads to the arrest and the conviction of an arsonist.

The second program, which is expected to be ready in a few months, involves setting up a computerized file of fire losses that occur not only in Mississippi but across the nation.

The file, called the Property Insurance Loss Register, will make it easier to detect fraud and arson-for-profit rings.

"The reward fund is intended to be a tool to elicit information from members of the public about arson fires," said Insurance Commissioner George Dale, who is also the state fire marshal.

"There is a great need for this type of tool for use with fires that are caused by juveniles," he said.

The commissioner cited the and then several people came forward with tips that led to the arrest of the youth responsible. The federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration has said that arson has been increasing at a faster pace in this country than the crimes of murder, rape, robbery, burglary, larceny, assault, and auto theft.

In Mississippi, arson increased 235 percent from 1974 to 1977, and this year the number of suspicious fires being investigated by the state

Hancock Home Economist offers tips for living with inflation

By SHIRLEY ROBINSON
Extension Home Economist
COPING WITH INFLATION

Living with inflation is expensive because prices increase as the purchasing power of your dollar decreases.

This means you must adjust your level of living or add additional income and/or other resources to maintain or improve your level of living.

Coping with inflation is not easy, but it can be done. However, you may have to cut corners and change your spending patterns. Many people, for the first time in their lives are having trouble making ends meet.

Learning to live with inflation forces families to rethink their budgets or spending plans. A flexible spending plan is useful.

It is helpful to know about 24 to 30 percent of your income goes for housing and about 15 to 25 percent goes for food (the lower the income, the greater percentage for food).

The spending plan you make should not be planned for all of your expected earnings. Base your plan on about 90 percent of your earnings; if possible, as this leaves some leeway.

Food costs may jump, utility bills may be uncertain, taxes may increase and there may be unexpected expenses. Be as flexible as you can with your plan, but use it.

Inflation may not last forever, but while it lasts, the following suggestions may help rework your spending habits:

Food is a special concern. Prices rose considerably last year. The estimated increase for 1979 is 60 to 10 percent, depending on weather, market demand and the general economic outlook. For some families, the food budget may be helped by school programs, lunches for elderly, food stamps, home gardens and better buymanship.

Inflation dulls the incentive to save cash. It is wise to have an emergency "cushion" in the bank. Current estimates say one or two months' salary is a good start. Inflation does not remove your need to save for future needs, such as vacation, college and retirement.

Remember: Don't go overboard on fixed dollar savings, but don't completely disregard them either. Pay yourself first with a savings program that fits your family plan and meets the needs of your family.

House prices were never higher. But, in an inflation, you can count on still higher prices in the future. There are several reasons why you may want to consider in housing.

Even in 1979, it's still a good investment. Although interest rates are higher, they are expected to level off in the latter half of 1979.

Most houses are paid for with borrowed money, and the borrowed money will be repaid with somewhat cheaper dollars. If you do decide to buy a house, make sure you can handle the payments.

Deciding whether you can handle a large house payment will depend, to some extent, on the cost of other goods and services and your managerial ability.

Transportation is a major item in most family budgets. There is probably no area in which you can save money easier. Buy cheaper transportation.

Most people like expensive cars, and most of us need a car. A smaller, less expensive car means lower monthly car payments, lower gasoline bills and lower insurance costs. This outlay can be made without changing your lifestyle.

During an inflation, be cautious about routine expenditures; stretch them out as much as possible. Think twice about buying new appliances.

In clothing, stick to basic and durable items. Use what you already have. This may mean a repair job or using the article until it wears out. Reduce the cost of your family expenses by taking better care of all items.

Since most families cannot afford large items, paying in monthly installments has become popular. Families need to guard against too much installment buying.

The old rule says not to commit more than 20 percent of your take home pay to consumer debt or more than one and a half times your monthly income to short term loans. You may need to cut this in half to cope with inflation. Inflation can result from increased demand; increased private demand; increased government spending or increased money supply.

Living with inflation is partly a matter of choice and your priorities. Is it more important to own a home or its furnishings? Is time with the family more important than overtime? Satisfying the greatest number of priorities while staying within your means requires careful management and planning.

Do you need help? Ask your local Extension home economist for Form 235, "The Family Spending Plan," and Information Sheet #40, "Make Your Money Pay Your Way."

Clean water shortage foreseen

CHEMICAL WASTES THREATEN NATION'S
WATER SUPPLY, SAYS

CONSERVATION GROUP - Water is a most pervasive necessity, covering 75 percent of the earth's surface and constituting 80 to 90 percent of human blood. The average person consumes about 16,000 gallons of water in a lifetime. In the lower United States, 4.2 trillion gallons of precipitation fall daily.

And yet we face a shortage of safe, clean water, according to a new publication from the National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation education organization.

"What is Happening to Our Water?" gives a brief history of waterworks and pollution, tells of the effects of water pollution on the health of human and wildlife, and gives a concise guide to federal water-pollution laws and how to use them to help plan for clean water supplies.

The pamphlet also devotes a section to a problem unique to the 20th century: chemical pollution of our waterways. Pesticides, oil, grease, air pollutants, and toxic substances buried in landfill are all either leaching into our water or being washed in by rain.

"What is Happening to Our Water?" concludes that we have come a long way from the "foul-smelling gutters" that were the sewers and waterways of earlier centuries. But if we are to meet the goal of swimmable, fishable, drinkable, and beautiful water, the public must strongly support federal and local clean-up and conservation efforts. Single copies of the 16-page pamphlet are available free from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Local netters storm Vicksburg

By RICH ADAMS
Two Hancock County netters swept matches in the George Wilkerson Memorial Tennis Tournament in Vicksburg, Miss. last week.

Patrick Wild and David McDonnell, both varsity members of St. Stanislaus High School's tennis squad, made fine showings at the Mississippi State and United States Tennis Association sanctioned match.

Wild won the 18-year-old singles against Bob Carroll of Tallulah, downing his opponent in straight sets 6-3, 6-0.

In the 18-year-old doubles, Wild and McDonnell teamed up to defeat Jeff McGee and Eric Thomas of Quinton 6-2, 7-6.

McDonnell came on strong in 18-year-old singles as he ousted Tommy Clements of Jackson, 5-2, 6-3.

McDonnell teamed with Jackson's Jeff Jolley in the 18-year-old doubles to defeat Leigh Furrh and Tommy Clements of Jackson 6-1, 6-1.

CAVITATION PLATES

All outboards and stern drives have cavitation plates.

These are flattened but well-streamlined metal fins located just above the propeller.

The purpose of a cavitation plate is to act as a barricade between the air just above and the propeller spinning rapidly just below the surface.

Without it, air could tend to push down into the frothy-water and reach the spinning prop.

If that happens, explain the MerCruiser stern drive boating experts, the prop will cavitate, or lose its firm grip on the water.

It will spin wildly, losing much of its thrust while at the same time allowing the motor to over-speed.

This creates a sensation that makes you think the engine has suddenly slipped out of gear.

It's annoying and sometimes startling to a boat's occupants, and certainly hard on the engine. Most well-tested boats never experience cavitation.

When they chance to, it often happens when making sharp turns.

The attitude of the boat in the water then may be changing the way water flows into the prop so as to allow air to reach it.

Should you some day experience cavitation, look first for such obvious causes as a nicked propeller blade or weeds that have draped themselves around the lower unit.

If correcting such things fails to stop cavitation, it's wise to visit a marine dealer and let experienced boat and motor mechanics look over the rig.

Collision at sea avoided with lights

The water in our local area is really getting warm due to the hot weather.

Fishing is not at its best when this takes place. Most fish are like people - when they get hot they look for a place where the temperature is right.

Depth finders and water temperature gauges are good aids for finding holes and the right temperature for fish.

Speckled trout fishing in the Louisiana marshes seems to have slackened off some.

Local fishermen that I talked to this past week made poor catches. The last trip that I made to the marshes was not the best. Fewer specks will be caught, but they should be bigger than school trout.

Remember to respect the other guy while fishing. You should slow down while passing close to other boats or people in the water.

Some good advice is not to anchor right on top of other fishermen.

This also applies to wade fishing. You should not wade right in front of or so close to the other fishermen so that he can cast his bait into your pocket. Enemies can be made if respect is not used.

CAMP REPORTS

LaGrange's - Fishing was slowed down some this past week. Some fishermen that caught a nice mess of specks.

Local fishermen that I talked to this past week made poor catches. The last trip that I made to the marshes was not the best. Fewer specks will be caught, but they should be bigger than school trout.

Live bait and dead bait is available; also skiffs can be rented. Mrs. Toxie Hall reports.

Joe's Bayou - Specks and red fish are now biting good up the Jourdan River and at Grassy Point.

Henry Neyray caught 14

specks and five rat reds this past week.

Live bait, ice and cold drinks are available. Mrs. Allie Coppelich tells us.

Baxter's Pearl River Marina - The Pearl River is clearing up but is still a little muddy.

Brem, white perch and goggle-eye are biting - real good on minnows, worms and crickets.

Bass are being caught in fair number on artificial baits. Joe Dale caught some nice white perch at Waste House Bayou on small minnows, according to Roy Baxter.

Bordages - The fish are biting pretty good all over. Speckled trout, redfish and sheepshead are some fish that have been biting. Live bait is available, says Wilford Bordage.

He stressed that the red light must be located six feet above the white light. "Red over white, fishing at night."

U.S. Coast Guard approved side lights are required when not fishing and may be left on while fishing. The port or left-hand side light is red. The starboard or right-hand side light is green. Also, a white stern light is required when not fishing.

"Personally, I'd try to have as much light as possible," says Lea. "I've been on some of the larger shrimp boats and know how aggravating it can be when you don't see another boat in time to make a smooth adjustment in course," he said.

"Having to stop or even turn sharply interrupts your fishing - and that means a lot of money," he added.

"You can improve your chances of being 'seen' on radar by hanging a radar reflector in your rigging," Lea explained.

"This is probably an especially good idea for a sailboat since they don't normally carry as much light at night," Lea maintained.

Human nature being what it is, Lea believes that operators on larger shrimp boats and tugs probably depend very heavily upon radar to scan the sea rather than taking time for a more troublesome "eyeball" scan.

"Since small boats - especially wood hulls - aren't effective radar reflectors they may not show up on radar," he explained. Thus, the need for a radar reflector.

"We've got copies of an Oregon Sea Grant pamphlet that shows you how to make an effective radar reflector for your boat," says Lea.

If you would like to have a copy, call or write Zach Lea, 4646 West Beach Blvd. Suite 1-E, Biloxi, Ms. 39531 - phone number 601-388-4710.

"The danger is compounded by an increasing number of 'sport' shrimpers operating small and often times improperly lighted boats," said Lea.

Lea asked Captain Phillips, of the U.S. Coast Guard auxiliary, to explain the proper use of lights on fishing boats.

"To be properly lighted, a red and white light positioned over the boat so that they are visible from all directions," Phillips explained.

He stressed that the red light must be located six feet above the white light. "Red over white, fishing at night."

Buccaneer Crew Notes

By KIM DEDEAUX

It's the 4th of July at Buccaneer State Park and everyone is enjoying a busy week.

The recreation schedule started on Friday with a refreshing Nature Trail tour. Ronnie Hoda and Wade Koenen, the park rangers, guided tours throughout the weekend.

Story hour entertained many of the young campers. The weekly movie, "Grizzly," had an enthusiastic audience.

Saturday's activities began with Kid's Crafts, with children creating greeting cards. They later played their favorite balloon games.

Later that afternoon young campers cooled off at the Buccaneer Water Slide.

Due to weather, our Shuffle Board was canceled, but everyone was entertained by the movie, "A Hurricane Named Betsy and A Lady Called Camille."

Other recreational activities for the day included volleyball, circle frisby, and a nature trail tour.

On Sunday, Broadmore Baptist Church of Jackson led our weekly worship service.

Danny Tullies and his father won the Sand Sculpture Contest. They entered a beautiful castle.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Esteves of New Orleans won the Shuffle-board tournament.

Other activities for the day included swimming and basketball.

The recreational activities continued through Wednesday.

DAV establishes national system to assist defoliant-damaged vets

The list of American casualties of the Vietnam War continues to mount, even though U.S. involvement in the fighting in Indochina ended several years ago.

Hundreds of thousands—possibly many more—American GIs were exposed to Agent Orange and other powerfully toxic defoliants while fighting in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War. Agent Orange contains dioxin, which Barry Commoner and many other scientists have called “The most toxic man-hands, fingers, feet and toes. Some hyperactivity and psychological problems have been reported in children of affected parents.

“It will be extremely difficult to show that these disabilities are the result of exposure to Agent Orange for the purposes of claims for VA benefits,” said DAV National Director of Services Norman B. Hartnett.

“That’s why it’s so important that a Vietnam veteran have a veteran's benefits expert, who does not get his pay check from the government, represent him in filing this type of claim," he added.

The services of DAV veterans' benefits experts are provided free of charge to veterans and members of their families.

Veterans of the war in Southeast Asia who have symptoms they feel may be related to such exposure to such herbicides as Agent Orange should contact; National Service Headquarters Disabled American Veterans 807 Maine Ave., S.W. Washington, D.C. 20024

The case will then be referred to a DAV National Service Officer in the veteran's area, who will have the resources and expertise of the entire DAV National Service Program behind him in developing a claim.

Choctaw Indians slate fair a number of severe health problems and some deaths among Vietnam veterans, as well as birth defects among some of their children. These disabilities are showing up years after exposure to herbicides such as Agent Orange.

The 30th annual Choctaw Indian Fair will be conducted July 11-14 in the Pearl River Community near Philadelphia, Ms. or Hwy. 19.

'World Championship' stickball games will be played

The 622,000 member Disabled American Veterans (DAV) has set up a nationwide program to assist these veterans in filing claims with the Veterans Administration (VA) for health care and disability benefits for illnesses that may be associated with dioxin poisoning.

The most common symptoms attributed to dioxin poisoning include:

- Numbness in fingers, toes, arms and legs in varying degrees;
- Nervous disorders, especially loss or decrease in the sensitivity of the senses;
- Psychological effects, including loss of memory, confusion, aggression or irritability;
- Skin rashes, specifically chloracne, which resembles a severe case of acne and is usually found on the face, arms, chest, back or legs;
- Altered sex drive, including diminished sex drive or impotence among men and increased sexual activity among women;
- Cancer, particularly cancer of the liver; and
- Birth defects in children born to affected parents.

The game of stickball is an ancient sport, being played hundreds of years ago to settle disputes between groups.

Since Choctaws have always been a peaceful people, stick-as "the little brother of war" and sometimes involved more than 1,000 participants.

The Choctaw Princess for this year's celebration will be selected July 11, and country music star Johnny Paycheck

Mississippi first in finfish plan adoption

Mississippi's new marine finfish management plan is probably the first document of its kind to be adopted by a state, says Thomas D. McIlwain, assistant director for fisheries research and management at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory of Ocean Springs.

"At least there was no other document like it available to serve as a model," adds McIlwain.

Custom-made fishery management plans are being developed and implemented by the individual coastal states. Those plans will mesh with federal fishery management plans being developed by several regional fishery councils. Those plans will be implemented by the federal government in the U.S. Fishery Conservation Zone-200-mile extended jurisdiction.

It took 1.5 years to complete the finfish plan which was presented in draft form to members of the Mississippi Marine Conservation Commission (MMCC) several days prior to a meeting on June 27 to consider its adoption.

Members made several revisions and voted to adopt the plan.

McIlwain said the plan's most important aspect is that it establishes a goal, to manage Mississippi finfish resources for optimum sustainable yield, and sets forth a number of objectives to accomplish this goal.

The plan specifies that biological, sociological, environmental, legal, and economic factors will be considered in the decision-making process; it provides a framework for solving problems, identifies gaps in technical data and outlines a five year management action program.

Second in importance, McIlwain said, the plan includes a compilation of all known data on the ten finfish species considered in the plan.

The MMCC selected those species on the basis of commercial and recreational value plus local concerns.

Species affected by the plan are the spotted seatrout, or speckled trout; sand seatrout; or white trout; red drum, or red fish; flounder, menhaden, southern kingfish, ground mullet or channel mullet; croaker, mullet or poyeyes; sheepshead and black drum.

In the 10 years from 1967 to 1977, marine finfish provided 96.5 percent of the volume of Mississippi's reported commercial landings of finfish and shellfish, with shrimp, oysters and crabs making up the remainder of the catch.

Production of menhaden and bottomfish for industrial uses accounted for 98 percent of the finfish volume while food fish made up only two percent of that volume.

All species considered in the plan except menhaden are considered to be food fish.

McIlwain said the draft plan is now being put in final language in preparation for publication. Dr. David J. Ertel of the University of Southern Mississippi (USM) and J.Y. Christmas of the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory served as editors of the plan.

Coordinated largely by staff members of the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory (GCRL), the plan was developed by a "working group" that also included two members from the MMCC, the USM, and the Sea Grant Advisory Service.

Assisting them was a 12-member ad hoc advisory panel consisting of a representative of commercial, recreational, processor and consumer interests in each of the three coastal counties.

The cost of developing the plan was approximately $39,996, with $23,500 being paid by the Mississippi-Alabama Sea Grant program and the rest by the State institutions, USM and GCRL.

A version of the plan will be printed that will include scientific data; this technical supplement will be available in limited numbers in ring binders so that data may be added and updated as needed.

A short version of the plan that omits the technical details will be published by Sea Grant later this year, McIlwain said, and will be available in good supply.

Archives Department acquires Balfour diary

The Mississippi Department of Archives and History has acquired the famous Civil War diary of Emma Balfour, who, as a citizen of Vicksburg during the siege of 1863 was an eyewitness and recorder of the historic events of May 16 to June 2, 1863.

On July 4, 1863, the Confederates surrendered at Vicksburg, and the fate of the Confederacy was sealed. Allen T. Akin, Vicksburg, husband of the late Emma Balfour Collier Akin, a great-granddaughter of Emma Harrison Balfour, presented the original diary to Elbert R. Hilliard, director of the Department of Archives and History, for permanent preservation and scholarly reference.

A printed copy of the diary, entitled "The Historic Vicksburg Siege, Diary of Emma Balfour, May 16, 1863 - June 2, 1863" was also presented to the Department.

Printed copies of the diary were edited and published by

Consumer agent suggests careful, selective shopping

By NORINE BARNES
Why do consumers return items? Three reasons are: change your mind, item is defective, or it doesn't meet your needs.

What can you do to avoid returns?

—Know what you want and need. It is important to have as much information as possible before buying. For example, when buying clothes know the kind, color and size needed.

—First comparison shop. Know the general price range for the product. Rule out stores with excessively high prices and, carefully investigate those with exceptionally low prices to be sure the store, its services and policies are reliable.

—Learn the policy of the store regarding returned merchandise. A store does not have to accept a returned purchase unless it was defective when you bought it (and you were unaware of the defect.) If this is the case, the store can simply replace the defective merchandise. —Realize that a sale is considered a verbal contract and is binding. Some stores will either exchange the merchandise or give a cash refund while others will just exchange the merchandise.

—Remember some stores offer service on merchandise they sell (usually for a fee, unless it is under warranty). Some other stores, as a convenience to customers, will send merchandise needing repairs to the manufacturer or service center. However, not all stores provide these extra services.

Remember, it is much wiser to learn the policies of a store before buying than to become upset later when you try to exchange something you bought.

After you buy:

—Be sure to save the sales receipt. This is your proof of purchase.

—Save all packaging and wrapping materials until you are sure they are not needed.

—Never remove attached labels and hangtags until you

'STRYKER'
A BANTAM PAPERBACK

The first novel by Emmy award-winning news anchorman Chuck Scarborough, formerly of Biloxi will be published in July.

Known through his appearances on NBC-TV's Today Show and WNBC-TV (NYC) "Newscenter 4," Scarborough uses the first hand knowledge gained as a newsman in this political thriller involving conflict between the media and the White House.

Scarborough, called by nationally syndicated columnist Liz Smith "the Robert Redford of NBC anchormen," won four Emmy awards at NBC.

Set against the real events of the Nixon presidency and Watergate and the real life media people that gained fame from them, STRYKER takes us behind the scenes of TV journalism.

Ben Stryker, a TV news celebrity, is at the top of the TV newscasting business.

For his brilliant coverage of the Kennedy assassination, he wins the coveted post of White House correspondent, "has a personal limousine and mingles with Washington's own aristocracy."

But, during a press conference, Stryker exchanges angry words with President Nixon on national TV - an action that ends his glamorous career in the national media.

Furious, Stryker's thoughts turn to revenge and he gets caught up in a plot to take the life of the man who ruined his own - Richard Nixon - in a suspenseful and violent drama that twists and turns its way to a surprising climax.

Scarborough began his broadcasting career in 1966 in Biloxi after serving in the United States Air Force.

Following his graduation from broadcast journalism studies, Scarborough joined WAGA-TV in Atlanta and quickly rose to the post of general manager and anchorman.

During this time, Scarborough earned six Associated Press awards.
